Soviet Union Must Lift Iron Curtain To Be Included In Foreign Aid Plan

Officials Admit Price May Be Too Big

Washington, June 28 (U.P.)—The Soviet Union must lift her economic "iron curtain" around eastern Europe and let those countries return to normal trade practices with the West if the U.S.S.R. is to be included in the proposed European reconstruction program, it was learned authoritatively today.

"That is the major 'price' the United States probably will demand for participation in any aid program that includes the Soviet Union and her eastern satellites. 'This is no time for Russia to come around with her hand out,' one official said.

American officials admit that it will be a big price—maybe too big—for the Soviets to pay. They recognize that it will call for a basic change in Soviet policy. And they also are aware Russia's answer will carry with it probably the answer to the whole peace-making problem—will it or will it not be worth-while to hold any future council of foreign ministers meetings on the Gernan-Peas Treaty?

The answer that is hoped for is unequivocal evidence by Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov at Paris of Russia's willingness to relax her economic grip on Europe and earnestly cooperate in a recovery plan for all of Europe.

The answer that is feared is repetition of the old Soviet line which will leave only the alternative of organizing a recovery program for western Europe and solidifying the already existent east and west blocs.

"We will not buy a pig in a poke," one high official said. "We know that the U. S. congress now will not approximate a hope for a program from which Russia or her satellites will benefit. Thus the Russians must show beyond any reasonable doubt that their interest is genuine; that they really want European policy to attain it."

Secretary of State George C. Marshall is very much aware of the fact that even if the Russian's convince him of their earnestness, he is still going to have a superhuman job getting the program to congress and the public in their present attitude toward Russia. But he is confident under those circumstances that he can.

Marshall included Russia in his original challenge to Europe to make a recovery plan with eyes open. He did not, as some erroneous reports have stated, stumble into it when pressed to define the geographical limits of Europe.

On excellent authority, it was learned that Marshall was well aware that inclusion of Russia at this stage was what, in his army days, he would have called a calculated risk. He knew the odds were heavily against the Russians going along on terms satisfactory to the U. S. Congress.

But Marshall reasoned that the world could not wait longer—until the Big Four meeting in London in November—to find out whether there is still a possibility of unification of Europe with Russia's assistance or whether Europe is irrevocably divided.

"If Russia just holds out her hand for a handshake, the answer will be no dice," one official said. "If Molotov starts his old record about Russia deserving the bulk of the aid because she suffered most destruction, and about the U. S. being hurt the least by the war and even profiting by it, then we will know the game is up."

Mixed My Own Fertilizer, McKellar Says In Debate On TVA 1948 Budget

Washington, June 27 (U.P.)—Two bitter enemies prepared to take up their fight over the Tennessee Valley Authority again today across a Senate appropriations subcommittee table.

Raymond R. Clapp, who won his position as head of TVA last winter despite the opposition of Sen. Kenneth D. McKellar, D. Tenn., came to ask for more funds than the House gave for TVA's fiscal 1948 budget.

McKellar, on the other side of the table, hoped the subcommittee would "turn him down."

The aging senator sat quietly during yesterday's hearings until late afternoon when he suddenly raised his fist and cried out that TVA was "dishonest and corrupt as hell."

He also took to task an old acquaintance—President Edward A. O'Neal of the American Farm Bureau Federation—for endorsing TVA fertilizer experimentation.

"You've changed your life since your younger days," the 78-year-old Tennesseean shouted. "You started out in life an honest man."

Judge Confirms Suspicion Held By Many Pedestrians

Richmond, Va., June 28 (U.P.)—A circuit court judge held today that the Ford Motor Company cannot be held responsible if a dealer fails to deliver a car in accordance with a promise.

Judge Julian Gunn made the ruling in a suit filed by Henry G. Bartsch, Washington patent attorney, who formerly lived here.

Bartsch contended he paid $25 and was placed on a list in October 1945, and that Universal Motor Company promised him a car by January 1946. He said he sold his old automobile and suffered "irreparable damage" when the dealer failed to deliver.

Gunn sustained a demurrer filed by Ford in which the National Company contended that no contract had been signed and that Ford could not be responsible for oral promises of its dealers.

Bartsch said he sued Ford as well as the dealer because Ford advertised that local dealers "fill orders as they are placed."

W. R. Huntley, attorney for the dealer, said the company had offered Bartsch a new car since his suit was filed.

Gunn took under advisement a similar demurrer filed by the dealer.

Hotel Denies Space For ADA Meeting

Memphis, Tenn., June 28 (U.P.)—Attorneys for a local Americans for Democratic Action chapter were considering legal action against Memphis's Peabody Hotel today after being denied meeting space in the hotel.

"We just don't want," Peabody Manager Frank Schutt said in announcing cancellation of the group's reservations last night. "We're not lending our facilities for the organization of a group we know nothing about."

Barney Taylor, southern director of the self-styled liberal, anti-communist organization, promptly charged that the hotel deliberately withheld notice of cancellation until the last minute to prevent the group from obtaining space elsewhere in which to organize its first southern chapter.

"Sincerely Schutt has heard of Leon Henderson, Wilson Wyatt, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Paul A. Porter and Elmer Davis," Taylor said in replying to the hotel manager's statement that he knew nothing of the organization or its leaders.

"ADA membership includes some of the most prominent names in America but apparently we can be vetoed by some of America's most insignificant figures," Taylor added and then indicated he would ask ADA attorneys to consider legal action against the hotel.

Lap Tables Make Ironing Easier

"It's the talk of Kenton county," said Zelma Byerly, home demonstration agent, as she described a homemaker club lesson, "Ironing the Easier Way," taught by Miss Ida C. Hagman of the UK College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Of greatest interest among several pieces of equipment exhibited, was a lap table on casters made to pull over the knees, thus permitting the housewife to sit while doing the weekly ironing. Homemakers handy with saw and hammer made lap tables of lumber, on hand, or converted old kitchen tables, a total of 4 being made in one month.

Nation Dips Into Already Low Coal Supply As Strike Sentiment Grows

Miners May Not Return On July 8

Pittsburgh, June 28 (U.P.)—Some 400,000 soft coal miners began their 10-day vacation today as a dwindling fuel stockpile heralded further cutbacks in steel production and threatened steel consuming industries.

More than 250,000 United Mine Workers (AFL) already were out in protest against the Taft-Hartley Labor Law before the vacation period began at midnight. They began to leave work last Monday, and depleted coal piles forced cutbacks in steel output almost immediately.

The big question now was whether miners would return to work on July 8. Sentiment in the coal fields was reported growing for a strike if no contract with the operators has been completed by that time. The traditional UMW policy is "No contract, no work."

The magazine Steel predicted that more iron and steel consuming plants would shut down during July and August than at any time in the history of the metal working industry. The automobile and electrical appliance industries were expected to feel the steel cutbacks almost immediately.

The latest steel cutbacks were reported by the Republic Steel Corp. in Cleveland, O. It announced that four blast furnaces were banked "because of shortages resulting from the coal strike"—one in Cleveland, two in Youngstown, O., and one in Birmingham, Ala.

Operations also were curtailed at the Geneva, Utah, steel plant, a subsidiary of U. S. Steel Corp., when no coal miners reported for work at the Columbia, Utah, coal mine and only one-third of a shift reported at the Geneva coal mine.

The largest curtailment came yesterday when Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., largest U. S. Steel operating subsidiary, announced a 55 per cent cut in Pittsburgh district steel operations.

Fight To Save Homes On Mississippi Appears Hopeless As Residents Flee

By United Press

Southern Illinois residents, aided by soldiers, fought a desperate battle to save their homes as the rising Mississippi River battered at levees along a 60 mile stretch today.

The fight appeared hopeless, however, and Jackson County Sheriff A. L. McGregor ordered everyone in the area—consisting of 50,000 acres—to flee to high ground as quickly as possible.

The river already was seeping beneath the dike and knee-high water swirled through the river front streets of Grand Tower and several other towns in the vicinity of Chester, Ill.

Walter Whitehead, Jackson county disaster chairman, said "anything can happen now."

"If the levee breaks it'll be like in 1943," he said. "The flood will take everything we own along with it."

He denied a report that the levee would be blown to relieve pressures. The report, carried by some newspapers yesterday, had pressures. The report, carried by some newspapers yesterday, had pressures.

The Red Cross announced that more than 33,000 persons had been evacuated from flood areas in Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Illinois during the past month.

In St. Louis, 3,000 persons fled to higher neighborhoods as the water came up river from streets. Police were raising barricades along Third street to hold the water back. The water was expected to reach a stage of 39 feet Sunday. It hit 39.14 in 1944 and 41.3; the record, in 1944.

Red Cross officials and U. S. engineers had one note of good news to announce today, however. They said the "worst of the flood situation appeared to be over" as Missouri and Iowa, although the Des Moines and Mississippi rivers were still out of their banks along most of the valleys.

The Des Moines was expected to crest at Ottumwa, Ia., this morning, flooding parts of the town for the fourth time in a month. Officials said the expected stage of 17.5 feet was not as high as had been predicted. The flood was "flattening off" over a longer stretch of river and would not spread as far into Ottumwa as previous floods, they said.

The most strenuous fight against the Mississippi was being waged on the dikes of the Degagnis-Fountain bluff levee districts between St. Louis and Cairo, Ill.

Eight hundred soldiers took their places behind thousands of local inhabitants, filling and passing sandbags and ramming them into place on the water-soaked levees.

Officials and residents had little hope that the levees could be held, however.

Although no new crests were expected on the Missouri river or its tributaries, Missouri officials said only the highway, U. S. 50, was open between Kansas City and St. Louis. And even U. S. 50 was damaged several blocks around flooded areas in Jefferson City.

More than 50 highways were reported closed in northern Missouri, mainly due to damaged bridges. About 150 prisoners were removed from Missouri State Prison, Farm No. 2 across the river from Jefferson City. Crops on the farm, which furnishes much of the food for Missouri prisons, were termed a complete loss.

The Kansas City weather bureau removed the Platte, Grand, Thompson and Weldon Fork, all Missouri river tributaries, from its flood list. At Agency, completely flooded earlier this week, the Platte fell 10 feet yesterday.

In Kansas, the Big Blue, Little Blue and Republican rivers passed their crests but the Republican was still filled to its banks below Concordia, Kans.

SWEET REVENGE

INTEREST GROWS AT BAPTIST MEET

Revival To End On Wednesday

Interest in the First Baptist Church revival continues. Rev. Braxton B. Sawyer, pastor, said today there were 11 professions of faith at the morning session on Thursday and the largest congregation that has yet attended was at the Thursday evening meeting, he said.

Dr. B. V. Ferguson, speaker for the revival, spoke on "God's Harvesters," using as his text "And I, if I Be Lifted Up From the Earth, Will Draw All Men Unto Me."

"It is the business of the Christians to lift Christ up that those who are dead in sin may see and live," declared the speaker. "By our daily walk, by our spirit, and by our oneness with Christ in our daily living, we must tell the story of God's love that our hearts are on fire," he said.

Dr. Ferguson said "God will hold us responsible for the attitude of indifference when the souls of men are doomed."

The sermon topic for tonight will be "The Peril of Resisting God." The Rev. Sawyer has announced that the revival will continue through Wednesday night.

U.S. Tries For Bargain Talks

Washington, June 28 (U.P.)—The nation today began dipping into a scant 32-day supply of soft coal as a complete halt in bituminous mining threatened to idle 2,000,000 workers by mid-July.

As the mines closed down for a 10-day vacation, Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug said he feared the government would be helpless to get the 400,000 members of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers (AFL) back on the job when the holiday ends July 8.

Other government officials, aware of the crisis, worked behind the scenes in a desperate effort to assure resumption of mining immediately after the vacation. Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach was reported ready to call on Lewis and the coal operators to sit down again at the bargaining table next week.

Officials kept the way open for President Truman to invoke the emergency provisions of the new Taft-Hartley labor law if Schwellenbach's conciliation efforts failed.

Krug, whose department relinquishes its control over the mines when the government contract expires Monday, said he doubted the Taft-Hartley Act could break a possible coal strike. He said he felt further congressional action would be necessary to cope with such an emergency.

However, Republican strategists in the house and senate shouldered suggestions that new legislation would be needed.

Sen. Joseph H. Ball, R. Minn., one of the chief advocates of the Taft-Hartley law, said the emergency section of the new act empowered the government to deal with a coal strike. That section provides machinery to delay strikes affecting national health and safety for a period of 140 days.

House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck said he could see "little possibility" of any more labor legislation at the current session.

Government officials estimated the nation's coal stockpiles above ground at 48,000,000 tons—enough for 32 days. But steel mills had only about a two-week supply, and some railroads about 25 days' supply. Officials said the 10-day miners' vacation, followed by a week-long coal strike, would throw 2,000,000 workers out of their jobs by the middle of next month.

Meanwhile, northern and western operators reportedly were considering another contract offer to Lewis in hopes of satisfying his demands for a wage increase equivalent to 35 cents an hour and other concessions.

Before the negotiations broke down several days ago, Lewis stipulated that he wanted an increase that would give his miners $65.25 for a five-day, 40-hour week, and $85.97 if they worked a sixth day on overtime.

The Southern coal operators came closer to matching Lewis' demands, offering $63.50 for a five-day week. But they refused to grant, portal-to-portal pay to which the miners have been accustomed.

Senators Disagree On Next President In Case Of Insanity In White House

By Frederick C. Oltman
United Press Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 28 (U.P.)—The Senate today rejected a bill to provide for the removal of a president from office in case of insanity, and the House passed a similar measure. The Senate vote was 54-46, and the House vote was 307-107.

The Senate bill, introduced by Sen. Charles McNary, R-Ind., would require a two-thirds vote of both houses of Congress to remove a president from office in case of insanity. The House bill, introduced by Rep. Charles McNary, R-Ind., would require a simple majority vote of both houses.

Seamen Disagree On Whether Mate Used Flashlight Or Gun

New Orleans, June 28 (U.P.)

The S. S. Brazil Victory, which prepared to weigh anchor two weeks ago, today was still tied up in the Mississippi river because of a dispute between two AFL maritime unions over a chief mate.

The Seafarers' International Union declared its members would not sail with Chief Mate C. D. Shaw, charged with pulling a gun on crew members when the ship was anchored at port of Spain, Trinidad, on its last voyage.

But the Masters, Mates and Pilots Union warned the Mississippi Shipping Co., owner of the vessel, they would not sail on any of the firm's ships if Shaw was ousted.

The MMP maintained that Shaw did not pull a gun but shook a flashlight at crewmen whom he had warned not to bring rum aboard ship.

N.C. &amp; St. L. Head Says Railroad Has Coal For 30 Days

By United Press

The Louisville and Nashville Railroad began laying off men today as a result of the coal strike, but two other roads, the Tennessee Central and the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, said their operations have not been affected yet. The superintendent of the L. & N. Knoxville division, G. C. Wendling, said 30 men had been laid off and that the railroad's operations might be affected at least 50 percent if the strike continues past the miners' vacation period.

In Nashville, N.C. & St. L. President W. S. E. Worth said his road has enough coal to last 30 days. President H. W. Stanley, of the Tennessee Central, said his railroad has "no strike in its territory" and is hauling coal to maximum capacity. The Tennessee Central serves many so-called strip- and truck mines in addition to mines whose employees are union members.

Mercy Pilot Defies Weather Warnings

Atlanta, Ga., June 27 (U.P.)—When a small PT-19 trainer landed on the runway against the advice of weather experts airport officials rushed out to reprimand the pilot.

The pilot turned out to be 19-year-old Norma Jeanne Sheehan on a "mercy mission" from La Grange, Ga. Her passenger was James E. Murphy, a veteran on pass from Lawson Veterans' Hospital.

An infection had threatened Murphy's sight in his one good eye, and he had to return to the hospital. Miss Sheehan learned to fly at Stephens College, Mo., and is now a flight instructor at the Palmetto Air School, La Grange.

The airport was closed due to poor visibility and low ceiling, but Miss Sheehan brought her plane safely down.

CHAPTER TWELVE

AS JEFF set about tidying the rooms, he wondered whether the unknown intruder had gained anything by his search. Jeff thought not. He felt that Davidson was too smart to have left anything telltale or significant lying around in the apartment. His important notes or data must be on his person or at the Record office.

The telephone rang suddenly. Jeff was across the room in three strides, hoping the caller would be Davidson. But the masculine voice though strangely familiar was not Davidson's. It asked for him.

"He isn't in," Jeff said. "Any message?"

"Who is this speaking?"

"Mr. Adams, a friend of his."

"Oh, when are you expecting him?"

"I have no idea. Jeff became suddenly wary. 'Who is this?'"

"Just an acquaintance. . . . Thank you very much."

There was a sharp click as the caller hung up.

Jeff frowned. That voice! Where had he heard it before? Then it came to him. That had been the bland, sibilant voice of Alexander Sartoris. Jeff was absolutely sure of it.

But why hadn't Sartoris identified himself? When he heard the Argentine Embassy—and Davidson had just returned from that country. There must be a link somewhere. Jeff wished the columnist had not been so chary with his information. It was all very well for him to ask Jeff to investigate the fact. He had been deliberately evasive.

TIME AND THE MAN—OF INDIA

EMPHASIZING A POINT with a gesture, Mahatma Gandhi, famed Indian leader, concludes his speech to the All-India Congress in New Delhi. The Congress president, Acharya Kripalani, smiles as he offers him a seat of honor on the rostrum. To make certain that time didn't hang heavy for the listening delegates, Gandhi gauged his speech with a watch hanging from his loin cloth. It was at this meeting that the Working Committee made the important decision to accept the British proposal for dividing India into Pakistan and Hindustan. (International)
